"sitting on a fault; will shake, not crumble

CHRISTIN BECKSTEAD
Universe Staff Writer

At the event of a big earthquake of BYU campus will shake but crumble, according to a BYU civil engineering professor. In the foot of "Y" Mountain there is a fairly distinctive and relatively new fault," said Dr. Les Youd, professor of civil engineering at BYU. "Faults tend to rupture at the local time after time. We know that earthquakes that are 5 or bigger will happen along the Wasatch Fault. This is within a mile of campus, but the fault dips under so the vibration will come from beneath us." The Wasatch Fault line is segmented along the mountains throughout Utah, starting up near the Idaho border going through Salt Lake then Provo and down through Central

The real problem during earthquakes is going to be the old buildings," said Youd. "A prime candidate of this is Academy Square. My guess is if they were to redevelop the buildings, major strengthening would be needed. If they didn't rebuild the buildings they could be living with a collapse hazard." According to Dr. Arnold Wilson, professor in civil engineering, you look at buildings built on campus within the last 20 years they will survive a big earthquake. They are built to withstand earthquakes and little or no problems. The only problem you will have problems with are older buildings like the Maeser, Johnson Smith and the Brimhall buildings. The old part of campus will experience the most damage, some of them could even come down," said Wilson. "The campus buildings are built stronger than the ones in downtown Provo — they will have a lot of prob-

BYU uses the uniform building code, which is used extensively throughout the Western United States. The code requires design consideration in a building that would withstand the acceleration produced by the earthquakes. A big earthquake would cause acceleration in excess of .6 times the force of gravity - this means 6/10 of the object's weight is forced horizontally.

"If a building is not built to withstand this force it will crumble or receive extensive damage," Youd said. "Buildings in Utah are supposed to be built under the uniform building code. How well they enforce the code is unknown," said Youd. "I know of some cities in Utah that don't follow the code, because it is too expensive or too time consuming."

The building code was strongly updated in about 1906 after the San Francisco earthquake. The code is now updated every three years and the code in use now is from 1983.

There is no way of predicting exactly when the next earthquake will occur along the Wasatch Fault, according to Youd. But from geology studies earthquake re-occurrence can be approximately predicted.

"The re-occurrence interval for Salt Lake is 2400-3000 years, whereas Provo is about 1700-2600 years in between large earthquakes," said Youd. "The last big earthquake happened more than 1000 years ago. So we are on the downhill slope, we are more than halfway to a big earthquake."

"There are a number of independently behaving segments along the Wasatch Fault," said Youd. "So if we had an earthquake in Brigham city it wouldn't go past Ogden, if there was one in Salt Lake it wouldn't go past the point of the mountain."

The ground BYU is built on is very stable. But we could have problems with land slides up in the hills. But we could have problems with land slides up in the hills," said Youd.

Accused agent 'not bitter'

Acquitted of charges, Smith says he would do it again

VICKI OLTROGGE
Campus Editor

The headline on this article on the front page of my edition was wrong. The article, with a corrected headline, is reprinted here for clarification. The Daily Universe regrets the error. The former BYU student accused of espionage but acquitted has come from his experience with bitterness toward the system and says he could be persuaded to become involved in the same operation that resulted in his arrest. "I could be persuaded that my contributions were significant and that I would be needed, I would consider it," said Richard Craig Smith, a former CIA case officer who directed and managed double-agent operations.

Smith's arrest in April of 1984 came from his involvement in a CIA operation. Although he left the CIA in 1980 because of family matters, Smith said they approached him 18 months later in Tokyo and requested his assistance in a double-agent operation, which he agreed to be involved in.

"A year into the operation, the CIA cover facility had to be shut down. I was left without a case officer," he said.

Complications that arose from the shutdown of the cover facility later led to Smith's arrest by the FBI.

"There were some very serious mistakes made that the government and the CIA did not want to be disclosed," said Smith.

To keep their operations confidential, the CIA disavowed Smith after his arrest.

"I became quasi-expendable because they thought it would be better to put me away than to have a corner of the rug lifted up," he said.

Women urged to stay home

By CAMILLE GOODRICH
Universe Staff Writer

Women should "come home" from careers and spend their time rearing and caring for their children, said LDS Church President Ezra Taft Benson, who spoke at the Fireside for Parents Sunday.

"A mother's role is God-ordained. Mothers are to conceive, to bear, to nourish, to love and to train. There is no more noble work than that of a good and God-fearing mother," he said.

Because women have claim on their husbands for support, a mother's calling is in the home caring for her family, he said. Instances where women are required to work are exceptions, not the rule.

If the husband has lost his job and he is still capable of work, President

Benson urged that the husband "do all in his power to allow his wife to remain in the home caring for the children while he continues to provide for his family the best he can, even though the job he is able to secure may not be ideal and family budgeting will have to be tighter."

Quoting LDS President Spencer W. Kimball, he said, "Two spouses working prevent the complete and proper home life, break into the family prayers, create an independence which is not cooperative, causes distortion, limits the family, and frustrates the children already born."

He said many families have suffered because much of President Kimball's counsel has gone unheeded.

President Benson counseled husbands and wives not to curtail the number of children or postpone parenthood for material and selfish reasons.

"Material possessions, social convenience, and so-called professional advantages are nothing compared to a righteous posterity. In the eternal perspective, children — not possessions, not position, not prestige — are our greatest jewels," he said.

Every man and woman has a duty to prepare tabernacles for as many spirits as they can, he said. "The deepest joys and blessings in life are associated with family parenthood and sacrifice." A child needs a mother more than all of the things money can buy, he said. "Spending time with your children is the greatest gift of all."

A mother should always be at the crossroad when children either come or go. She should take time to be a real friend to her children, read to them, pray with them, and have meaningful weekly family home evenings.

He urged mothers to have their families be together at meal times, read the scriptures together as a family and do activities together. "Mothers who help families pray and play together will stay together and will bless children's lives forever," he said. "A mother's unqualified love approaches Christlike love."

Mothers need to take advantage of teaching moments, and not shift the teaching responsibility to day-care centers or baby sitters.

'Role is God-ordained'

ASBYU: not as powerful as some think

By CAMILLE GOODRICH
Universe Staff Writer

Many students may wonder how much power BYU's student government has in university policies. Although many people don't realize it, ASBYU is not a government in the sense that they have power to mandate anything to the administration, according to ASBYU President Jon Coleman.

"The word government is misleading," he said. "In terms of power, students shouldn't expect ASBYU to be able to do anything they want."

"Mandating anything to the administration would be like telling the president of the LDS Church what to do," said ASBYU Vice-President Reed DeMordaunt.

ASBYU does have power to mandate within their own organization and has control over their programming and budget. "Within our own organization we govern ourselves," said DeMordaunt.

Within the given structure, ASBYU is given a certain amount of trust to act responsibly. "If they fulfill that trust, they get more opportunities and in a sense more power," said Director of Student Programs Tamara Quick.

"Power is earned, not mandated. It is a function of trust," she said.

The administration welcomes student input and it is possible for students to have an impact, Coleman said. However, as a branch of the administration, ASBYU has to go through the lines of authority to accomplish their objectives just like any other branch.

"We cannot demand more than any other faculty member has a right to demand anything, but that doesn't mean that we can't have an impact with our ideas and proposals," he said.

If a student had an idea or concern that was researched, properly presented and reasonable, Coleman said he would be willing to present it to the Dean of Student Life, Maren Mouritsen or Vice-President John Stohltun.

He would try to get answers and some type of feedback to why or why not the idea or proposal would work, he said.

"The administration may not always respond the way we want, but if they say no, we should be able to know why. If students don't agree with an issue or policy, I think it is appropriate to let teachers, administrators, and the President's Council know students are concerned. Especially if students have a sincere interest to help the university," Coleman said.

According to Quick, students are encouraged to consult with the administration who follow directives from the BYU Board of Trustees. "The university follows the nature of the church. We all have bosses and we have to be interrelated."

One attempt to provide information and feedback from the student body to the administration has been the ASBYU President's Council. It consists of 50 students who provide information to Coleman. He is responsible for passing student concerns to appropriate university officials, he said.

"ASBYU does have a very strong advisory role," DeMordaunt said.

Gelatin wrestling attracts crowds in Provo

By VICKI OLTROGGE
Asst. Campus Editor

While some students went to the movies at the Varsity theater or out for ice cream at Stevenett's last Saturday night, others were packing into the old Woman's Gym in Provo to witness "Jell-O III."

This third annual event provided the excitement of gelatin wrestling and dancing.

"I thought it was a fun activity but there's no way I'd do it, it was gross," said spectator Teresa Steenhoeck, a junior from Downey, Calif. majoring in public relations.

Spectators had to pay $2, and in between dancing, they could watch several different male and female tag-teams wrestle each other in a ring filled with red gelatin.

"There was never a dull moment," said Steenhoeck, "it was a wild, exciting time and fun to see everyone get mangled."

Starting at 10 p.m., a match was held every half hour where various teams took turns wallowing and slushing about in a mixture of gelatin and ice.

Some of the teams included the "Sow Sisters," the "Andrews Sisters," (guys dressed up as girls) the "Beastie Boys" and a special match between Shawn Knight and a man witnesses identified as a member of the BYU men's track team.

Chris Funk, a member of the "Andrews Sisters" team and a sophomore from Mesa, Ariz. majoring in psychology said it was fun wrestling in the Jell-O.

"I like the slimy feeling of the Jell-O," he said.

Funk said he didn't know what to expect when he first heard about the wrestling but he said there was nothing wrong with it.

I WOULD DANCE WITH MY DATE IF I COULD TELL WHICH ONE HE WAS.....

"When you hear Jell-O wrestling your mind wanders, but when I saw what was going on I didn't see anything morally wrong with it," said Funk. "Everybody pretty much kept their clothes on."

Dirk Gardner, a sophomore from Mesa, Ariz. majoring in psychology and also a member of the "Andrews Sisters" team said he had never wrestled in Jell-O before last Saturday night but that he would probably do it again.

In between matches the dance floor was cramped due to the capacity crowd in the gym and as soon as the music stopped, enthusiastic viewers scrambled to find the optimum spots to watch the wrestling.

Celebrities spotted at the event include Robbie Bosco, who was seen standing with his hands in his pockets, surveying the activities on the dance floor.

A two-car accident in front of the Sam F. Brewster Building backed up rush-hour traffic on Campus Drive shortly after 5 p.m. Monday. Although the cars involved were damaged "there were no injuries, just scratches," said University Police officer Dave Elder, who was at the scene. He added no citations had been issued.

Decision nears on execution of minors

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court said Monday it will decide whether the death penalty is a valid punishment for convicted murderers who committed their crimes before they were 18 years old.

The justices agreed to hear the appeal of Oklahoma death row inmate William Wayne Thompson, convicted of a murder committed when he was 15.

Thompson's appeal contends that executing teen-age killers violates the Constitution's ban on "cruel and unusual punishment."

Of the more than 1,800 men and women on death rows nationwide, about 35 of them were condemned for crimes they committed as juveniles.

Of the 69 U.S. prison inmates executed since 1977, three were killed for murders committed before they were 18.

The high court attempted to resolve the same issue in 1982, in the case of Oklahoma death row inmate Monte Lee Eddings, but decided his case on other constitutional grounds.

A decision in Thompson's case is expected sometime in 1988.

Recently the court also said it will consider killing a 12-year-old lawsuit stemming from an armed confrontation between Indians and federal agents at Wounded Knee, S.D., in 1973.

Illegal aliens find sanctuary in Canada

TORONTO (AP) — More than 4,000 immigrants from El Salvador and Guatemala have found sanctuary in Canada over the past three months, taking refuge not from civil war and poverty at home but from a U.S. crackdown on illegal aliens.

"I like it here. It's friendlier. When you arrive, they shake your hand," said 20-year-old Alfonso Amaya of San Vicente, El Salvador. He lived illegally in Los Angeles for four years before fleeing to Toronto with one brother and two sisters.

US law offers amnesty to illegal aliens who can prove residence in the United States since January 1, 1982. But threatens millions of others with deportation as of May 5.

Alarmed that thousands more might arrive, Canada tightened its open-door policy last Friday. Central Americans wanting to come to Canada must remain in the United States and apply at Canadian consulates.

Officials said the new system is designed to distinguish between genuinely needy cases and those simply seeking a better life and a way around normal immigration procedures.

Suspected terrorist leader's trial begins

PARIS (AP) — The first trial of France's special "terrorist court" began today in a courthouse turned into a fortress for the case of a Lebanese man accused of directing assassinations of American and Israeli diplomats in Paris.

"Georges Ibrahim Abdallah, I am an Arab fighter," the defendant said in answer to the first question by the president of the court as the proceedings started 15 minutes late.

About 11/2 hours before the trial was to begin, a police convoy of several vehicles jammed with officers rolled up to the courthouse at high speed, one of the vehicles carrying Abdallah, suspected leader of a terrorist group called the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Factions.

The police van was driven into the courtyard as an array of gendarmes stood guard outside. Thousands of riot police and gendarmes were patrolling Paris streets, department stores and train stations.

Abdallah, 35, is accused of complicity in the murders of Lt. Col. Charles Robert Ray, the U.S. deputy military attache in Paris, killed Jan. 18, 1982, and Yacov Barsimantov, second secretary at the Israeli Embassy, killed April 3, 1982.

Begun released; vows to keep up fight

MOSCOW (AP) — Josef Begun came home from prison Monday to a hero's welcome at a snowy railroad station in Moscow, where he vowed to keep up the fight for Jewish emigration and human rights until all Soviet political prisoners are free.

"Freedom for all prisoners of Zion!" the 55-year-old Begun shouted to dozens of friends and supporters as he emerged from the train that carried him to Moscow after more than three years in Chistopol Prison.

"I am insanely happy to be free," Begun said in Russian. "I see this is a certain sign that all political prisoners will be free in the nearest future. I will devote all my strength to see that this happens as soon as possible."

He was sentenced in October 1983 to seven years in prison and five years in exile for Jewish emigration activities and for opposing restrictions on teaching Hebrew. Begun became a symbol of the Jewish emigration movement.

Amid cheers and tears, friends hoisted him onto their shoulders and sang the Israeli national anthem.

First Democrat announces candidacy

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Rep. Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri announced his bid for the presidency on Monday, acknowledging he is unknown to most Americans but insisting that sheer effort will catapult him to the 1988 Democratic nomination.

The moderate Democrat, accompanied by about 20 members of Congress including House Majority Leader Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., and House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., opened his bid with a call "to make America first again" with a reactivated national government.

Gephardt said his campaign will center on trade. "The first task of national leadership is to remove the barriers that limit what people themselves can do."

The six-term St. Louis-area congressman became the first major Democrat to officially announce for president, with several others to follow suit this spring.

Inspirational thought of the day:

"The difficulty, my friends, is not to avoid death, but to avoid unrighteousness; for that runs faster than death."

— Socrates, in Plato's "The Apology of Socrates"

CIA agent found innocent

he was selecting the jury for his trial, he expected the CIA to step in and claim knowledge of him. But they never did.

"There are some people in the Bureau who believe right to this minute that I beat the system," he said.

In spite of this, Smith is still supportive of the CIA. "The majority of the people in the CIA are very bright, dedicated and skilled people," he said.

He said it is necessary for the CIA to keep their successful operations confidential — thus only mistakes made by the CIA get publicized. "Every time they screw up, that's when the press comes," he said.

"The intelligence organizations are made up of people. People make mistakes; they abuse authority and sometimes these things just happen," he said.

Smith said there are certain issues in life that present dilemmas for individuals and governments. "Intelligence itself is a dilemma," he said.

He said governments face the dilemma of dealing with other governments that espouse different ideologies. "The reality is that the democratic way of life never was and never will be compatible with Soviet ideology," said Smith.

He said the CIA is necessary because the government needs to be able to understand what's going on.

There are problems, however, for individuals such as Smith, a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, who have conflicts between religion and their duty to do their jobs. "We are caught between telling the truth and conducting intelligence," he said. "Intelligence does not tell the truth — that's the game they play."

"Lying is necessary," he said, and intelligence agents must ask themselves "to what extent do we go to protect the freedoms we enjoy."

Smith said intelligence agents lead a different type of life. He quoted an author who described a double-agent operation as "an acid trip in a hall of mirrors."

In spite of this conflict, Smith said intelligence agencies recruit heavily from the LDS population because many LDS members speak a foreign language and have served missions that give them valuable experience.

Smith was found innocent of five counts of national security violations, including conspiracy, espionage and unauthorized disclosure of classified information to a high-level officer of the Soviet KGB in April of 1986.

Cocaine stays popular in high schools

DETROIT (AP) — Marijuana use among the nation's high school students was down 3.3 percentage points from 1985 and 9.5 points below the peak year of 1979.

But cocaine remained popular among the nation's high school students and emerged in 1986 as the No. 2 illicit drug among regular drug users.

Of the 15,200 students interviewed, 16.9 percent said they had tried cocaine at least once, 12.7 percent had used it within the past year and 6.2 percent had taken it within 30 days.

Alcohol and cigarette use remained relatively steady from the previous year.

Cross-country skiers race 20 km

LINDA RITTENHOUSE

Cross-country skiers raced from West to Mill Creek Canyon in Overland Race Saturday, a distance of 20 kilometers. The first skier reached the summit of a three-mile course straight up mountain and was on his way in 45 minutes," said Doug Har- Director of Mountain Opera- for Park West. "These guys are athletes, real ath-," he continued. "Cross-country is an endurance sport like marathon running. They have to be in physical condition." McCarthy, third-time winner of Overland Race, came in with a time of 1:19:05. McCarthy said, "I set the record two years ago with a time of 1:14, but that year the down slope was real icy. It was much nicer today." A real race "This is a real cross-country race — none of that go-around-the-golf-course stuff. It's power all the way up, and technical abilities on the down slope." "You don't have to be first to the summit to win. I was second to reach the top," McCarthy said. "You come over (the summit) into a thick grove of Aspen (trees), and you come down thrashing through the trees. Then you come out into a big meadow. That's where I took the lead," said McCarthy. Christoph Schork, "a transplant from Germany to Park City," came in second. It was his third time to place second.

Kathy McCarthy, sister to the first-place winner, was first in the women's division and fourth overall. Her time was 1:28:31. "We keep it in the family," she said. They are both residents of Park City. Park West sponsors Steve Erickson, owner of White Pine Ski Tours, co-sponsored the event with Park West. "We usually have some participants from BYU's Nordic Ski Team, but they must have had another race this year," he said. Skiers were welcomed with cases of New York Seltzer. Water as they finished the race. They came in with icicles hanging from eyelashes, beards and ears, but none were worn out. "You recover on the down side," said McCarthy.

Depressed women topic of seminar

Because women have a greater chance of experiencing depression than men, Charter Canyon Hospital is sponsoring a seminar Wednesday dealing with depression. Depression — its causes, symptoms, and treatments — will be the topic of the seminar at Charter Canyon Hospital Feb. 25 at 7 p.m. "The emphasis will be on successful self-help strategies that can help women enhance self-esteem, self-assertion, and self-control," said Toni Hughes, who will present the seminar entitled "Women and depression: Why Do I Feel So Sad?" Hughes has worked with women suffering from depressive illnesses for 10 years. The seminar is offered at no charge as part of the hospital's Community Education Program.

Engineering week declared do eggs, transistors, water balloons, airplanes, and cars have in common? BYU's Engineering Week. Bangerter officially declared this Utah Engineers' Week. Bangerter's declaration "engineering applies scientific discovery to our translating ideas into reality." Variety of contests, activities and displays have been planned for BYU's version of the event, according to Vern E. chairman of Engineering Week. Egg drop competition will take place at the east of the Crabtree Technology Building on Tuesday from 12 and 2 p.m. Credille said eggs will be placed in a shock-absorbing device designed by the competitor and dropped from a height of 50 feet. The winner will be determined by the lightest package with a surviving egg. Douglas Smoot, dean of the College of Engineering and Technology, will serve as target for the annual "Soak the Dean" activity on Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. on the Checkerboard Quad. This activity is sponsored by the Engineering and Technology Council. Participants will "launch" water balloons at the dean from a distance of 100 feet. Credille said there must be an egg in the balloon to control velocity and it must be launched from some form of mechanical catapult. The Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers, Inc., will sponsor a "Black Box Contest" on Wednesday and Thursday after 2 p.m. in 428 CB. Contestants must identify different types of transistors, enclosed in black boxes, by monitoring their characteristics, according to Credille. Thursday will see three other contests. An airplane design contest will be sponsored by the National Computer Graphics Association in the ELWC Ballroom at 11 a.m. The American Society of Chemical Engineers will sponsor a bridge building contest in the ELWC Stepdown Lounge from 12 to 2 p.m. and the American Society of Mechanical Engineers will host a pinewood derby at 11 a.m. in 110 CB. About 15 booths have been set up in the ELWC Garden Court by various academic societies and associations within the College of Engineering Sciences and Technology. The purpose of the booths, according to Credille, is "to show what the different engineering groups are involved in and how it relates to every day life." J. Bonner Ritchie, professor of Organizational Behavior, will speak at the Engineering Week banquet Thursday. Tickets for the banquet are available in any engineering department office. A "3 K Fun Run" will close the week Saturday at 9 a.m. The run, sponsored by Tay Beta Phi Honor Society for engineers, will begin at the west side of the Clyde Building.

Eating disorder support groups forming

Support/therapy groups for the treatment of eating disorders are being formed at Charter Canyon Hospital. Symptoms and early signals of anorexia nervosa, bulimia and obesity will be discussed, and self-help techniques introduced and explained, according to Dr. Maxine Murdock, who is one of the groups.

"The earlier a person with an eating disorder gets help, the more quickly and successfully she can be treated," she said. Do not wait until major physical or emotional damage has taken place, she cautioned. Murdock is a clinical psychologist and a recognized expert in the treatment of eating disorders. The various groups will meet for two hours, beginning at 7 p.m. on Wednesdays. They are open to the public.

Shoplifting won't pay, says police

By JANET L. FISHER and CAMILLE GOODRICH
Universe Staff Writers

The high-stress environment of a university can make students do things they ordinarily wouldn't. For instance, some students may be tempted to shoplift without counting the consequences.

"People who have a tendency to take part in that kind of activity do not understand what the ultimate ends may be," said University Chief of Police Robert W. Kelshaw.

According to the Utah Criminal Code, shoplifting is a class C misdemeanor, resulting in a $500 fine and/or 90 days imprisonment.

"If you are convicted of a crime of theft and wish to pursue a career with a government agency, law enforcement or cash handling, your chances of being employed, due to the crime committed, will be reduced considerably," Kelshaw said.

If the stolen merchandise is only a dime sticker, the shoplifter will be prosecuted the same as if a more expensive item were taken, said Wayne Finnegan, training supervisor at the BYU Bookstore.

"If someone is caught removing or concealing merchandise without paying for it, then they are shoplifting, even if they just forgot to pay for it. The action shows the intent," he said.

Shoplifting causes an increase in sales because businesses lose the profit they would have earned from the missing merchandise. "For example, if a store's margin is 2 percent of sales, the store must increase its sales by $2,500 to compensate for the theft of an article costing $50," according to A. James Fisher, author of "Security for Business and Industry."

The cost of shoplifting for the bookstore has decreased since police began taking pictures of the stolen merchandise instead of keeping it as evidence for trial, allowing the merchandise to be sold, said Finnegan.

Latest statistics show 12,489 cases of shoplifting were reported in Utah last year. Recovered merchandise totaled $558,045, according to the FBI Uniform Criminal Report. "Utah shoplifting statistics are 6 percent higher than the national average," it said.

Statistics also show the number of shoplifters caught are increasing in the bookstore, said Kelshaw. "This school year, the tendency has been for shoplifters to take as many items as they can get away with. They are also taking more expensive items," he said.

Orem police are also faced with this problem. Although last year's cases only increased slightly, the value of the items taken doubled from $14,000 to $28,000, said Crime Prevention Officer Garry Guymon.

According to Finnegan, "Fifty percent of the shoplifters caught in the bookstore are BYU students and most of them are 17 or 18 years old."

Although BYU students are not considered a high risk category, ZCMI Assistant Manager Paul Willardson said the students comprise up to 30 percent of the shoplifters caught yearly.

People from all walks of life shoplift, said University Mall General Manager Rob Kallas.

Shoplifting occurs because of the challenge and excitement involved. Shoplifters may want food or an object at that moment and they're out of money. "Sometimes we catch a shoplifter who has more than enough money to pay for the item, but they feel they have the right to just take what they want," said an undercover security employee at the bookstore.

Some shoplifters justify their actions by saying the bookstore makes enough money and won't miss the objects taken, said Finnegan.

It is not the first offenders who are usually caught, but the habitual shoplifter, said Kelshaw. Once a shoplifter gets away with stealing the first time, it will be easier for him to do it again.

"Professional shoplifters have come to the bookstore — but even the pros get caught here," Finnegan said.

The bookstore has developed preventative measures, one of which is using undercover security employees. They look and act like typical students but they are watching for shoplifters.

"Ninety percent of shoplifters will not steal if they know they're being watched," said Finnegan.

"If roommates are aware of others that have a problem with shoplifting, we encourage them to share that information with bishops or University Standards so they can be helped before it's too late," said Kelshaw.

The bookstore receives money and letters every year from past students who apologize for shoplifting and want to make retribution. Many of the students caught thank the bookstore and say they wish they had been caught sooner, so they could have received the help they needed, said Finnegan.

"Some students make a mistake and we want to help them so it won't happen again."

Students must appeal tickets correctly

By PAM OLSEN
Universe Staff Writer

The BYU Traffic Committee has recently had problems with parties trying to circumvent correct procedure because of different circumstances after receiving citations, said a member of the BYU Traffic Office.

In some cases, instructors have called the student court to have tickets waived which have been reviewed by students who parked in wrong zones due to those instructors' directions.

When a student receives a citation in a situation such as this, the instructor may not call the student court and ask to have the ticket waived; the correct procedure must be followed, said Michael Harroun of the BYU Traffic Office.

"Professors would tell students, 'It's okay, you can park here while you're doing something for me,' but they don't have authority," said Susan White, ASBYU attorney general.

"Whether they're on department business or not, they (students) have to have the proper permit," she said.

In such an instance the professor can write a memo or come to court with the student, said Harroun, but the student is responsible for the ticket. Students and their spouses must have their tickets reviewed by the student court; the Hearings Office deals with non-student employee and visitor tickets.

A student must make an appointment at the information desk in the Wilkinson Center to have his ticket reviewed by the student court. Appeals are also filed at the information desk.

Sketch of bombing suspect released

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—A composite sketch was released today of a suspect in a bombing here which federal authorities say is linked to 11 others around the county in the past nine years.

The bombing Friday, which injured a Salt Lake man, was the latest in a series of explosions that have injured 21 people and killed a Sacramento, Calif., computer store owner, said Robert Bryant, FBI special agent in charge in Utah.

"It has now been determined that there is a link between this bombing and 11 other bombings that have occurred across the country since 1978," Bryant said.

Stress avoided by relaxation

MARILEE SCHOLL
Universe Staff Writer

Listeners learned how to protect themselves from depression by participating in relaxation techniques to reduce stress at the Women's Health Conference, Thursday.

Most depressions are usually caused by stress," said Kenneth C. Tuttle, a licensed psychologist and executive director of the Department of Behavioral Medicine at Utah Valley Regional Medical Center.

Tuttle said there are four types of treatments for stress disorders: emotion-focused, problem solving, tension reduction and cognitive restructuring.

Techniques for tension reduction include guided imagery and muscle relaxation. Tuttle demonstrated how images can affect the mind and body. He said positive images have positive effects and negative images have negative effects.

As an example of this, he told the class to close their eyes and imagine they were at home in their kitchen. He told them to take a lemon out of the refrigerator, slice a wedge out of it, lean their heads back and squirt the lemon juice into their mouth.

He asked if they were salivating and explained that although they didn't actually have a lemon, thinking about one makes people salivate.

Most of the class admitted that it had this effect on them.

Many request plastic surgery

KRISTI LALLI
Universe Staff Writer

Mother nature isn't always nice, which is why many people opt for plastic surgery to change the way they look.

Each year thousands of people undergo plastic and reconstructive surgery, Dr. Charles V. Pledger said Thursday at the BYU Women's Health Conference.

Nowadays there is hardly a part of the body which can't be fixed with plastic surgery. Almost like magic, plastic surgeons can remove wrinkles from the face, change the shape of a nose, get rid of stubborn saddlebags and even put permanent eyeliner on women.

In a face-lift, the skin is pulled back against the hairline. "Face-lifts are done to remove loose skin," Pledger said.

A facial peel is a different kind of surgery which removes wrinkles, he said.

Another popular procedure is surgery of the nose. "You can get really dramatic results with nasal surgery," he said.

Suction lipectomy, a technique which originated in France, is used to remove localized deposits of fat in the thighs, buttocks, knees, abdomen and upper arm, said Pledger.

"No matter how much you exercise, you can't get rid of these fat deposits," he said.

The surgeon uses a vacuum device which literally sucks the fat out, said Pledger.

and uplifting music. The tape stimulated muscle relaxation, guided imagery, and auto suggestions (giving suggestions to yourself).

He also used a tape to guide the class in a muscle relaxation exercise. It gave instructions to tighten specific muscles, then to relax them.

Tuttle explained when muscles are tensed and then relaxed, they go into a deeper state of relaxation.

Tuttle said beneficial results of tension reduction approaches include the reduction of physiological arousal, mental relaxation and increased responsiveness to suggestion.

"Most people who use these methods seem to have more energy than they did before they used them," said Tuttle.

He said doctors used to think stress was a disease, but they now know disease is a result of stress.

Need to learn to listen

LDS are too institutional

By PAM OLSEN
Universe Staff Writer

People see members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints as having high personal values, but also see the LDS Church as highly institutionalized, said a professor of psychology Thursday.

"That poses a real paradox," said Kay Smith, who lectured as part of the Psychology Department Colloquium Series.

People tend to see personal religious values, such as a belief in Christ, as being more important than institutional or traditional religiousness, which includes priorities such as attending church regularly, he said.

Smith, who recently conducted studies of nonmembers to determine common values and perceptions of "prospective investigators" of the LDS Church, said one of the church's "institutional" doctrines people have a hard time accepting is the belief that only one true church exists.

"They couldn't imagine that God ... would be exclusive," he said.

In doing missionary work, members shouldn't immediately jump into a discussion about LDS beliefs, but should learn about the nonmembers' beliefs first and establish a common rapport, he said. "The best thing we could do is to train members to bring up the subject of religion, and then listen until they ask, 'Well, what do you believe?'" said Smith.

Smith isolated a group in his studies that he identified as those who were "seeking."

"They're not the eager seekers who'll grab you on the street and say, 'Have you got the church I'm looking for?'" he said. Instead, they might acquiesce if a proselyting member approaches them in the right way.

The population studied in the survey rated their perceptions of other religions as well as the LDS Church. They saw LDS Church members as being close to their families and having high values, but also saw them as being close-minded, said Smith.

The survey population also indicated that LDS Church members did not seem to believe in Christ as a personal savior as strongly as members of more traditional religions, such as a Catholic or a Protestant.

Smith's studies, conducted within the past two years, were funded by the Correlation Department of the LDS Church.

BYU challenges number change

KRISTI LALLI
Universe Staff Writer

BYU and channel 11 have always been synonymous with each other until the first of this year when the station was switched to channel 25 in Utah areas.

This change affects cable subscribers in Salt Lake, Riverton, West Valley and Davis counties, said Melvin R. Rogers, station manager at KBYU.

The Federal Communications Commission used to have a law that public stations must be carried on cable systems on their own channels, but it was repealed.

However, within the last year, that law has been repealed and according to the FCC, there is no such law in effect at this time.

Now local cable companies can choose public stations around the channel spectrum, said Rogers.

This has happened all over the country," Rogers said. Cable companies have moved public stations out of way to put national programs, such as Cable News Network and CNN on prime channels closer to the work stations.

This type of station change has occurred at KBYU and station officials are concerned about a decline of their viewers for several reasons.

First, according to a study done by a group of public stations in the south-central United States, the upper channels are not watched as much.

People tend to scan until they find something they want; they start at the bottom and don't make it up to the channels," said Rogers.

Another problem, he said, is that only channels one through 13 can be picked up on a cable system if a converter box is not hooked up to the television. In addition, although every cable subscriber gets a converter they usually only have one for one television.

"So if we are on 25 and the TV in the master bedroom only goes to 13, people can't watch BYU basketball as they are falling asleep at night," said Rogers.

Also, he has been told that if people decide they don't want cable anymore, the cable company will just take the converter out rather than uncable the home and re-hook the antenna.

"When they do that it leaves people with a cabled home that can't get any channel above 13, so they will never get KBYU on channel 25," Rogers said.

Community TV of Utah was contacted but had no comment about the issue. The fact that 45 percent of the homes in Salt Lake have cable and most of KBYU's viewers are in Salt Lake and surrounding areas also poses a problem, said Rogers.

Over the past 20 years, KBYU has spent thousands of dollars promoting channel 11, said Rogers. Research has shown their channel identity to be very good.

KBYU is asking for public outcry from present cable owners to return the station back to channel 11.

There have been 70 public channels all over the country that have recently been changed as KBYU has, he said. Out of those 70, 13 have been changed back because of public protest.

"We got ours back by being loud, not nice," said the 13 stations in a letter to KBYU.

Maori class offered beginning fall '87

Students interested in unique languages will have an opportunity this fall to take a beginning Maori class.

Maori is a Polynesian language spoken in the Cook Islands and specifically in Aratonga.

The class will be taught by Etuate "Eddie" Lavulavu, who currently teaches Maori at the Missionary Training Center.

"I think the students are lucky to have this class offered this fall. It's a good opportunity for them to speak a beautiful Polynesian language," said Lavulavu.

Lavulavu learned Maori when he served a 2 1/2-year mission in the Cook Islands. He taught the language at BYU Hawaii and in junior high schools in Tonga.

Lavulavu is currently translating the LDS temple endowment ceremony into Maori.

Maori is not a difficult language, said Lavulavu.

It resembles Hawaiian and Tahitian, and is not bound by difficult grammatical rules.

Lavulavu said students who enroll in Maori will benefit from the experience because "they might get called to a Maori-speaking mission, it could help someone in a career, and who knows, they might end up marrying a Maori."

Fifteen people have enrolled in the course. If the interest level continues, there will be classes offered continuing up to the advanced level.

The language will fill the foreign language general education requirements.

The class will be taught Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6-8 p.m. in the Jesse Knight Humanities Building and will be a four credit hour class.

Exhibit displays works of LDS artists

Mediums include glazed tile, stoneware, monotype, prisma color

By MINDY DOVER
Universe Staff Writer

BYU's Fine Art's Exhibition, which features works by LDS artists, illustrates the university's dedication to developing and advancing art techniques.

"The unique thing about this show is that BYU is willing to host a show, offer awards, and encourage artists to continue to grow and develop in their selected media," said Clyff Allen, director of galleries at BYU.

"We help artists build an exhibition record. We're an important regional stepping stone."

—Clyff Allen
director of galleries

Not all universities continue to support their art students. BYU, however, brings back former students by exhibiting their work, as well as encouraging other artists.

"We help artists build an exhibition record. We're an important regional stepping stone," said Allen.

The exhibit features the work of artists from The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The artists come from all around the country, especially from the western states area.

The show, which is composed of 40 pieces, features different art mediums.

Watercolor, pastels, glazed tile, stoneware, prisma color, silkscreen, monotype, silver gelatin, acrylic, and gouache, are all art forms on exhibit.

Dave Allen from Bountiful, Utah, examines an interesting sculpture at the art exhibition. Allen is majoring in international relations.

The exhibit is smaller this year than in years past because of the jury's selectivity, said Alan. Wulf Barsch and Robert Marshall, BYU studio art faculty members, judged the show.

The show's award winning pieces are: "Coupled" by Osreal B. Allred, "Returning at Evening" by Doug Himes, an untitled jar by Gordon D.

Moore, "Shepherdess" by Trevor Southey, "Wall Detail Pond, Cottonwood Canyon" by John Telford, and "Stack Series No. 1" by Clay Wagstaff.

The award winning works will be purchased by BYU's Art Department and will hang on faculty office walls. This is BYU's way of supporting the arts, said Allen.

Noteworthy artists with works on display in this exhibit are Southey, Osrea and Moore, said Allen.

The display can be seen in Gallery 303, HFAC through March 30 on weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Hours are extended on Monday and Friday until 9 p.m. Hours for the gallery on Saturday are from 5 to 9 p.m.

Artist transmits energy in paintings

By MINDY DOVER
Universe Staff Writer

Art pieces, which depict scenes from Venice, the desert and red rock valley in an energetic and lively way, are currently on display in the Harris Fine Arts Center.

"You feel the energy in his work. He transmits it so freely and expertly. You can't help but get excited and want to go home and paint."

—Clyff Allen
director of galleries

The artwork, which was created by University of Utah Professor V. Douglas Snow, has the unique ability to entangle the viewer in the piece, according to Clyff Allen, director of galleries at BYU.

"People get all wrapped up in what Doug is doing. I think that's a really special talent," said Allen.

"You feel the energy in his work. He transmits it so freely and expertly. You can't help but get excited and want to go home and paint."

Snow paints life into his pieces. "I think staying alive is valuable," said Snow.

One of the exciting exhibit aspects is the size of the art pieces. "The works make the gallery space particularly exciting," said Allen. Due to the size of Snow's work, its full effect can only be obtained when it is viewed close-up and from a distance.

Another exciting feature of this show is the active paint surfaces created by Snow. He uses thick and thin paint together, said Allen. This combination creates an unusual surface.

Snow also uses structure as a means of providing an area for creativity. "If the structure feels strong, it can sustain a lot of improvisation," said Snow.

Snow's exhibit, which will be on display in the B.F. Larsen Gallery, HFAC through March 30, has not been easy to obtain.

Allen has been working to display this exhibit for five years. The show was finally secured through the Stremmel Gallery in Reno, said Allen.

'La Boheme' well worth attending

By ALCOLM LITCHFIELD
Staff Writer to the Universe

Editor's note: The actors mentioned in the review alter their roles with other performers. For more information, contact the Music Ticket Office, HFAC, 378-7444.

BYU's current production of Puccini's "La Boheme" is well worth attending.

This famous opera of love is given a fresh reading by the actors, who — rather than perform a mere rehash of a tired warhorse — present an often poetic production. The action takes place in nineteenth-century Paris during the winter. The sets are well suited to the deJong Concert and provide a beautiful backdrop to the action. The excellent lighting design and generally good dramatic direction add greatly to the production.

Although the story is principally concerned with the relationship of Rodolfo and Mimi (their meeting, happiness together, and her eventual death), a second couple provides relief and contrast. The relationship between Marcello and Musetta is full of quarrels and jealousy. Puccini and his librettists punctuate the basic tragedy with touches of humor throughout.

This production tends to emphasize comic relief over the fundamental story. Invariably, these moments are well enunciated and acted. Unfortunately, the result is a production that lacks a solid foundation on the ill-fated lovers. In crowd scenes, the turbulent relationship of Marcello and Musetta is always more visible and interesting than that of Rodolfo and Mimi.

Even vocally, Marcello and Musetta tend to come off better.

Ryan Anderson acts the part of Marcello well, singing beautifully and securely throughout.

Similarly, Jennifer Barton's light soprano adequately fills the requirements of the role of Musetta; her part in the Act II ensemble is a dramatic and vocal delight.

Tim Brewster, as Rodolfo, sings the part with great musicality and sympathetic acting. Nevertheless, his light, beautiful tenor voice is not yet equal to the demands of the role. The orchestra often strains not to overpower him, and some high notes are unsteady.

BYU chose to import Jean Herzberg, a professional, for the role of Mimi. She was only here for last week's performances though and has already left the show. However, in the future Nina Warren will be performing in the role of Mimi for the rest of the show's run, tonight, Thursday and Friday.

Clyn Barrus's conducting does much to infuse poetry into the opera. He gives the singers freedom to emote, yet keeps ensembles as tight as possible. His reading provides great forward momentum without neglecting lyrical moments. The orchestra responds generously to support the singers.

The production is complimented by a fine chorus and uniformly good singers in the other roles. Although the singing is in English, less than half the words are readily understandable.

Still, anyone unfamiliar with the work can easily follow the plot.

Although certain details might be lacking, the sum of the production is an engaging, visually beautiful rendition of one of the world's most popular operas.

MADELEINE L'ENGLE

Author of A Wrinkle in Time, Circle of Quiet, etc.

"The Anthropic Principle"

In this address Madeleine L'Engle will be speaking of our callings as human beings to observe and contemplate, to think about the place of chance in our universe, and to consider the implications of indeterminacy to a religious perspective. She has written about our human responsibility to

- ♦ live by courage, without which "we cannot be fully alive."
- ♦ grow into maturity, "where the experiences which can be acquired only through chronology will teach [us] how to be more aware [and] open."
- ♦ do the impossible, like children, by thinking creatively and sometimes breaking beyond the bounds of the impossible, and so becoming heroes ourselves. "A hero provides us with a point of reference. . . . All teachers must face the fact that they are potential points of reference. The greatest challenge a teacher has to accept is the courage to be; if we are, we make mistakes; we say too much where we should have said nothing; we do not speak where a word might have made the difference. If we are, we will make terrible errors. But we still have to have the courage to struggle on, trusting in our own points of reference to show us the way."

- ♦ let our lives revolve around the communities of family, church, city, country, and globe, much as the earth revolves around the sun in life-renewing orbit.

Question-and-Answer Session at 12 noon in the Varsity Theater.

Women's tennis team takes first in its weekend tourney

By RICKY FRANK
Universe Sports Writer

Hosting its second round robin tournament of the season over the weekend, the BYU's women's tennis team captured the team title by beating some of the nation's top teams.

Participating in the three-day tournament were four teams that are ranked in the nation's top 25.

Northwestern came to the tournament with the highest ranking at No. 7. BYU is ranked No. 17 followed by Texas A&M at No. 19. The Georgia Bulldogs are ranked No. 23.

Both BYU and Northwestern ended the tournament with 18 match wins. Since BYU had more direct wins, the tournament crown went to them. Georgia ended the tournament with 16 wins to finish third while Texas A&M could only manage two wins to finish fourth.

BYU's biggest team win of the tournament came by defeating No. 7 Northwestern 5-4. The Wildcats featured Katrina Adams who is ranked No. 14 and Diane Donnelly who is ranked No. 19. Adams and Donnelly also team up in doubles and are ranked No. 3 in the nation.

The tournament showcased many good matches and players. BYU's All-American Susanna Lee completed the tournament without losing a single set. "Susanna played exceptionally well," said BYU Coach Ann Valentine. "She beat some talented ladies."

Lee's closest set was the second set with her match against Alice Reen of Georgia. Lee won the first set 6-1 and then had to go into a tie breaker to win the second set 7-5. Lee's overall record now stands at 18-8.

BYU's Lesley Hakala also fared well, winning two out of her three matches and now posts a season record of 17-7.

Hakala's first match of the tournament was against Texas A&M's Kim Labuschagne who she defeated in three sets. In her second match, Hakala was defeated by Northwestern's No. 14 Katrina Adams 6-4, 6-4. "Lesley had a terrible match against Northwestern. It was just one of those off days," said Valentine. In her final match of the tournament Hakala played No. 26 Jane Cohodes of Georgia and defeated her 6-3, 6-3. "Lesley handled Jane very well. Her strokes were there and she hit the ball well,"

Cougar first singles player Susanna Lee defeated three opponents in last weekend's round robin to finish undefeated.

said Valentine.

According to Valentine, Michelle Taylor also had a good tournament and a strong win over Northwestern.

Valentine feels that Jennifer Stoker's win over her opponent in the Northwestern match was very instrumental in helping the Cougars beat the tough Wildcats.

Valentine is very pleased with the team's doubles play. Hakala and Taylor are ranked No. 16 in the nation and post a 18-4 season record. "Lesley and Michelle have really been coming along and playing well," said Valentine. "I'm also very pleasantly surprised with the play of Mary Beth Young and Anna Callender. They have only been playing together for three weeks and are 6-1."

"I'm very pleased with the kids, their team spirit and attitude to toughen up," said Valentine.

On Thursday No. 10 Clemsons, No. 13 ASU, and No. 22nd Pepperdine will be coming to Provo to participate in the third round robin tournament of the season that BYU will be host.

Capener hurt in car accident

Senior guard Bob Capener was injured Sunday night when he was involved in an automobile accident in Salt Lake City.

Capener, who was driving, suffered a bruised hip and ribs when another car collided into the driver's side. Upon impact, Capener was knocked across the seat.

Capener did not practice with the team on Monday, and it is questionable whether he will be healthy enough to attend today's practice.

However, BYU Coach Ladell Andersen said he expects that Capener will suit up and play Thursday against San Diego State.

Forward Michael Smith and center Jim Usevitch, along with football player Darren Fortie were also in the car with Capener. They were not harmed in the accident.

Capener and the others were pulling out of an LDS Church parking lot following a six-stake fireside in Salt Lake when the collision occurred.

On Saturday, Capener broke out of a four-game scoring slump by scoring 17 points, including four three-point field goals. He helped lift the Cougars over league-leading Wyoming. Before that game, Capener had only averaged four points per game in the last four contests.

The Cougars finish its Western Athletic Conference regular season Saturday against Hawaii in Honolulu.

The team will then have five days to prepare for the WAC Tournament on March 5-7 hosted by the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque.

Runnin' Rebels cling to No. 1 spot following come-from-behind victory

Nevada-Las Vegas, which overcame a 19-point halftime deficit this weekend, remained atop The Associated Press' college basketball poll today while North Carolina and Indiana swapped the No. 2 and 3 positions.

The Runnin' Rebels, 28-1, were voted the No. 1 team by a nationwide poll of sportswriters and broadcasters for the fourth consecutive week on 10th this season as they received 11 first-place votes and 1,258 points.

North Carolina, 25-2, and Indiana, 24-2, had been ranked third and second respectively, for the past three weeks with Indiana edging the Tar Heels by one point last week. This week, the Tar Heels received six first-place votes and 1,195 points, while the Hoosiers were on top on 11 ballots and finished with 1,179 points.

DePaul, Temple, Purdue and Iowa remained fourth through seventh, while New Orleans broke into the poll at 19th, the first ranking in the school's history.

Georgetown, 21-4, which beat then-No. 8 Pittsburgh 65-52 and then-No. 9 Syracuse 72-71, jumped from 11th to eighth with 786 points. Pittsburgh, 22-5, which holds a one-game lead over Georgetown and Syracuse in the Big East Conference, fell one spot with 680 points, seven more than 10th-place Alabama, 21-4, which was 12th last week.

Syracuse, 22-5, led the Second Ten with 617 points. Following the Orangemen were Oklahoma, Clemson, Illinois, Texas Christian, Kansas, Duke, Florida, New Orleans and Providence.

Cougars win 'Weber Wars'

MARK POULOS
Universe Staff Writer

The 13th-ranked Cougar wrestling team managed to defeat past 17th-ranked Utah State 25-17 and host Weber State 30-22 Friday night, in a tri-wrestling match at the Event Center in Ogden.

Cougar, touted as the "Weber Wars," BYU found themselves in early battles in both dual meets.

Following what seems to be a year long strategy, the Cougars relied on the heavier weights to fight back and score the victories.

Behind 22-3 to the Wildcats and 17-7 against the Aggies, BYU's last five weights, 158-pounder Dean Mitchell, 177-pound John Kohls, 177-pound Craig Boggard, 190-pound Mark Willis and nationally ranked heavyweight Jim Nielsen all scored impressive wins as they rallied to overcome the substantial deficits.

Nielsen, currently ranked third, was outstanding as he blanked Utah State's Leroy Liggins, 10-0 and pinned Todd Wilwright of Weber in 2:51.

Mitchell provided the upset of the evening by nipping 11th-ranked Bryce Hall of Utah State 5-4.

BYU, who won the 1987 WAC championship last week, entered Ogden without 126-pound WAC Most Valuable Player Brian Ransom, who is resting a strained back.

However, according to Cougar Assistant Coach Greg Robbins, BYU should be at full strength for the upcoming NCAA qualifying tournament being held at Boise State University on March 7.

Darnel Ray Ply (left), driver of the truck, suffered a broken elbow when his load of lumber overturned in Provo Canyon on Saturday.

Driver overturns load in canyon

By LINDA RITTENHOUSE
Universe Staff Writer

A truck and trailer overturned in Provo Canyon, 1/2 mile above Bridal Veil Falls on Saturday, dumping its load of lumber over the embankment.

Darnel Ray Ply of Drake, Colorado, was westbound on the canyon road when, "A deer jumped in front of my truck, and when I swerved to miss it the load became unbalanced and turned it (the truck) over. I should have killed the deer," he said.

Ply received a broken elbow and cuts and bruises. Sheila Ply, also traveling in the truck, was badly bruised.

Two witnesses, a man westbound behind the truck and a woman eastbound, both declined to give their names and left before the highway patrol arrived. The woman, known as 'Susie,' later called the highway patrol with a statement. Susie said, "He (referring to Ply) almost hit me, and there was no deer."

The male witness said he parked his vehicle and ran to the cab of the overturned truck as the driver and his wife were climbing out of the front window.

When asked what had happened to the deer, the man replied, "There wasn't any deer."

Highway Patrol Trooper Lee Atwood responded to a call received at 8:01 a.m. placed by a passing motorist. The accident report stated Ply had been "going too fast around a corner and the truck turned over."

"A citation was issued to Ply for failure to control a vehicle in the canyon," said Atwood.

He said the skid marks made by the truck's wheels did not indicate the driver had swerved.

Gov't ranks university grants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sixteen of the 20 universities that received the most federal research money in 1967 were also at the top of the funding list for 1984, the auditing arm of Congress reports.

The top 20 campuses garnered 42 percent of all federal money spent in universities on research and development, according to a newly released analysis by the General Accounting Office.

The study, based on the National Science Foundation's annual compilation of the 100 universities that receive the most federal research money, found 19 institutions on the list in 1984 that were not there in 1967. Four are medical research facilities in Texas.

Three of the four campuses that cracked the top 20 in 1984 but not in 1967 were from California: the University of California-San Diego, the University of California-San Francisco and the University of Southern California. Pennsylvania State University also joined the top 20.

The four that fell out of the top 20 were: New York University, which ranked 16th in 1967 but 26th in 1984; Duke, which slid from 19th to 23rd; University of Maryland, 18th to 44th, and Princeton, 20th to 56th.

The GAO study, "University Funding: Patterns of Distribution of Federal Research Funds to Universities," compared fiscal 1967 with fiscal 1984.

However, in the latest rankings for fiscal 1985, which the National Science Foundation released just last month, NYU moved back into the 20th position.

Massachusetts Institute of Technology held the top spot in 1967 but was second in 1984 to Johns Hopkins University, which was in 15th place in 1967.

There were some other significant shifts among the top spots: the University of Washington rose to fourth from 13th, while the University of Michigan fell from second to 12th in 1984.

Harvard fell from fourth in 1967 to 10th, while Yale rose from 17th to 11th.

The government provided $5.6 billion to universities for research and development in 1984. The top 100 universities got 86 percent of that money.

Johns Hopkins is ahead of the pack because of the $300 million earmarked for its Applied Physics Laboratory.

'Rockwell' is not biography

By KRISTIN BECKSTEAD
Universe Staff Writer

January's top-selling book in LDS bookstores was "Porter Rockwell: A Biography" by Richard Lloyd Dewey, but according to a BYU professor it can't actually be called a biography.

The book's subject is the past bodyguard for Joseph Smith and Brigham Young. Porter Rockwell later became the marshal of Utah. The book covers the period from New York, 1830, until Rockwell's death in Utah, 1878.

"Dewey suffered from what his predecessors suffered — lack of information about his subject. There is so little actual fact and so much legend about Porter Rockwell that it is not likely, if not impossible, to write a biography of him, let alone a definitive biography," said Clark Johnson, an associate professor of church history at BYU.

According to Dewey, several years were spent researching in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints archives and libraries for original source material about Rockwell. Information was found in court records, letters and journals from early church history.

"There is not a lot written by Porter Rockwell, consequently what was written about him was from interviews by reporters and writers, newspaper accounts and journal accounts of incidents and events in which he was involved," said Dewey. "Therefore, my references cite several hundred sources that relate to Porter Rockwell."

According to Johnson, "This book is well worth reading. The author, Richard Dewey, is a talented writer and puts readable, workable words together to make the history interesting."

Dewey said, "Porter Rockwell was the legendary bodyguard to Joseph Smith. 'In the West, as a defender of Mormons, he purportedly killed more men than Wyatt Earp, Doc Holladay and Batt Masterson combined. All of these men have had TV series and movies produced about them when westerns were popular in the 1950s and 1960s."

"But amazingly Rockwell was overlooked. That is why I think he is generally unknown today, despite the fact his story is far more spectacular than any of the other well known Western figures."

There are 507 biographical entries in the book, six of those were prepared by Rockwell himself," said Johnson. "This is most interesting because Porter Rockwell could not write."

In 1839 when Rockwell gave testimony before B.K. Morsell, a justice of the peace for the District of Columbia, he dictated a four page document, and then signed it with an "X," according to Johnson.

"Of the documents reviewed in the book this is the most extensive of all of Porter's contributions to his own history," said Johnson. "The rest of Porter's definitive history is learned through the eyes of observers and innuendoes by the author."

"There were at least seven occasions where Porter Rockwell dictated letters, texts and affidavits to friends, attorneys and reporters: a letter to Col. Kane in 1858; a joint petition with Franklin Neff in 1853; the B.K. Morsell event; a testimony was dictated to Thomas Bullock, the Salt Lake County recorder in 1856 and before W.I. Appleby of the U.S. Supreme Court for the territory of Utah in 1857; a detailed story published in the Millennial Star about his incarceration in Missouri."

"Because of the latest research that was put in the book, it is different than any other material that has been written on Porter Rockwell. Many incidents in Rockwell's life are approached differently because of this," said Dewey.

"There is obviously room for differences of opinion. But I feel this is by far the most accurate, comprehensive and objective work yet produced on Porter Rockwell," said Dewey.

The book was published in May of 1986. It is in its fourth printing.

Afghan warns against Soviets

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Abdul Shams remembers too vividly the night he and 36 Afghan government officials were betrayed by the Soviet advisers they had been told to think of as brothers.

The Soviets had promised the Afghan government $1.6 billion in arms "under the pretext of providing aid to the people to counter the so-called invaders, the Americans," Shams told a crowd of about 400 in Provo Saturday.

When the first shipment was airlifted into the country in 1979, Afghan leaders invited 1,200 Soviets to an extravagant banquet at the Intercontinental Hotel.

"We celebrated with Johnny Walker (Scotch whiskey), gave them souvenirs in advance and all our hospitality and kindness. There was dancing, singing, and by 7:10 p.m., everyone was happy," he said.

The mood turned ugly moments later when the Soviet guests put guns to the heads of the 37 Afghan leaders, including Shams, a former economic adviser to President Hafezullah Amin.

The leaders were escorted to a truck and taken to prison. Amin was executed, and Shams' death warrant was signed by his younger brother.

"He told the court he once saw me carry a Rotary Club card — an organization he said was connected with the CIA," Shams said.

Shams, 73, now a California resident and president of the Afghanistan Foundation Inc., was incarcerated for five months. On the way to his execution in 1979, Afghan freedom fighters bombed the truck and freed him minutes before the execution.

Of the 37 leaders at the banquet, he is the only one alive to tell of his haunting experience, Shams said.

"They came to us as friends and later said we were brothers. We trusted the Soviets and we lost. Don't you trust them or you will lose too," he urged his audience Saturday.

"We were naive and stupid and they took our country away from us. Don't ever sit at the bargaining table with them because they will always win and you will always lose."

The Soviets had been steadily increasing arms shipments to Afghanistan. Like Shams' brother, more than 30,000 Afghan youths studied in the Soviet Union between 1957 and 1979.

"When they came back, they took over," Shams said. "It was the intellectuals and sophisticated who betrayed our country."

He said the Soviets thanked the intellectuals for giving them the country, then called them traitors who would betray again and slaughtered them. When the Soviets took control in 1979 they freed 25,000 prisoners and made them security guards.

"These criminals terrorized the country, arresting and killing hundreds of thousands of my people," Shams said.

As head of the Afghanistan Foundation, an educational organization, Shams travels the lecture circuit throughout the United States. His stories always contain a plea for Americans to learn from the Soviet takeover of Afghanistan.

"We made a great mistake. We trusted the Soviets and lost our country, our freedom and the lives of 2 million people," he said.
